ABSTRACT

The Palmyrene Prosopography is a study of the Palmyrene social organisation through a direct analysis of the available epigraphical material based upon published and unpublished sources. The work is organized in the following divisions:

CATALOGUE. Six thousand anthroponyms have been listed in alphabetical order. Each name is followed by its Greek or Latin transcription (this in the case of bilingual or trilingual texts), the date and the document where it is attested. The genealogy of each person is also provided.

TRIBES, CLANS and FAMILIES. Palmyrene society had a tribal structure; tribes and smaller social groups belonging to them have been identified. Each family is graphically represented by genealogical trees showing the relationship amongst members of the same family. They are labelled with reference to the ancestor who often is the eponym from which the whole family takes its name. At Palmyra, the most common onomastic formula is represented by the individual's personal name, his patronymic and his clan or familial name. The individual is identified by tribal and family names. The single name is the first element of identification; thus whenever possible, an etymological explanation of names has been provided to understand the ethnic origin of each family.

OFFICES and PROFESSIONS. Private citizens may also be identified through professional information. The analysis of offices and charges partially allows to reconstruct the social stratification. Religious offices were the most prestigious ones and the clergy came from the most important tribes. It has to be noted that the limited number of professions is due to the nature of the epigraphical material. Four main categories have been recognized: public, religious, commercial and military. A more complex picture of the society can be obtained from the analysis of offices and titles, onomastics, and rights of succession. This also sheds light on the position of freedmen and women within it.

ACKNOWLEDGMENTS

There are many people to whom I owe a warm debt of thanks. Prof. Mark J. Geller, University College London, kindly accepted the supervision of this thesis and thoroughly revised the work. Prof. Eduard Lipiński, Catholic University of Leuven, offered his constant encouragement and precious scientific advice. He granted me access to his personal library, to the library of the University of Leuven and always drew my attention to relevant bibliographical sources. Prof. F. Mario Fales, University of Padua, who initiated me in Semitic philology and lent me his support in all these years. He contributed with generous suggestions and criticisms, beneficial to the preparation of the thesis.

Thanks are also due to Dr. Gunhild Plough who kindly made available the catalogue of the Palmyrene sculptures in the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek of Copenhagen; Mrs. Diane Thomas of the Saint Louis Art Museum of Saint Louis who sent a beautiful photograph of the Palmyrene bust present in the collection; Mr. Ross Fox of the Mead Art Museum of Amherst who sent all the material on the sculpture at Amherst College.

Many thanks go to the helpful staff of SOAS library, in particular to Mr. Arshad Ishaq. Miss Fatima Malha kindly took care of me while I was in Brussels. Mr. Luc Van der Linden designed the lay-out of the genealogical trees.

This thesis is dedicated to my parents who never failed to support me during my years in London.

All mistakes are mine only.

INTRODUCTION

The present work was inspired by the Italian M.A. of the author. The M.A., bearing the title of Palmyra between Aramaeans and Arabs, was essentially a philological analysis of Palmyrene anthroponyms. The interest there was focused on etymologies and onomastic formulas.

The more that research was widening, the stronger became the realization that a name is nothing more than a 'label' behind which there is an individual and his world of relations. As the individual is part of a social group and he gains privilege from the relationship with his father, ancestor or tribe, the study of the organisation of the onomastic system becomes helpful in the understanding of the social organisation. This is why the necessity was felt of a new study and a more comprehensive approach, pointing to an overall and more complex picture of the structure of Palmyrene society.

The large amount of Palmyrene epigraphic material has been the source for an endless number of publications, but none of them have been specifically dedicated to a systematic reading of genealogies, kinships and connections between the single and the tribe, the single and the family, the temples and the professions. Prosopography becomes thus the more suitable ground for this kind of research and is the subject chosen for this Ph.D. thesis, written under the supervision of Prof. M.J. Geller and with the external collaboration of Prof. F.M. Fales and Prof. E. Łipiński.

The aim of this study is to give a prosopographical representation of the city of Palmyra at the apex of its development and, in the light of prosopography, to underline the bounds that tie the single characters within the sphere of the familial, social, and political relations. Moving from the reading and interpretation of names as possible source for the determination of the origin of the individual and/or his affiliations, the author has connected the names to specific figures, trying to distinguish the many homonyms that, spanning four centuries, are to be found in Palmyra.

The names of the characters have then been linked to their public and personal spheres. The private sphere has been determined pursuing an analysis of the kinship to which the individuals may be referred, at the level of his close family, his clan and his tribe. On the other hand the public sphere has been identified carrying out a research of the relations of the persons with the offices and charges assigned to them by the city of Palmyra.

The material studied for this thesis includes all the epigraphic data available, starting from the Corpus Inscriptionum Semiticarum; the Inventaire des inscriptions palmyréniennes, I-XII (1930-1975); the material from the tesserae gathered in the Recueil des tessères de Palmyre; the inscriptions from the region to the North-West of Palmyra edited by D. Schlumberger; the texts discovered by the Polish archaeological mission published in eight volumes Palmyre I-VIII (1959-1984) and followed by M. Gawlikowski, Recueil d'inscriptions palmyréniennes (1974); a catalogue listing all the Palmyrene antiquities in the Louvre Museum by J. Dentzer-Feydy and J. Teixidor, Les antiquités de Palmyre au Musée du Louvre (1993) and the ones in the Carlsberg Glyptotek by F.O. Hvidberg-Hansen and G. Plough, Palmyra Samlingen. Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek (1993). The inscriptions published in major reviews and periodicals like Syria, Berytus, Damaszener Mitteilungen, Mélanges de l'Université Saint-Joseph, etc. have also been used.

The thesis contains, in addition, published photographic material not yet interpreted like several plates in the Japanese monograph on Palmyrene sculptures by K. Tanabe, Sculptures of Palmyra, I (1987), and the catalogue of a recent exhibition in Paris, Syrie, Mémoire et Civilisation (1993), with a section on Palmyra, that adds new information to the onomastic catalogue and allows the reconstruction of family trees. The bibliographic investigation has been carried out until June 1994.

The Palmyrene epigraphic material spans from the first witnesses attested in the first century BC to the fall of the city, in the third century AD. The Latin and Greek inscriptions belonging to the post golden time of Palmyra and Byzantine time were left out from this research.

The nature of the inscriptions is mainly of funerary type; they come especially from the large area of the necropolis where family tombs were excavated. Foundation texts sometimes record the date and the name of the builder but the funerary material frequently lacks in dating and one has to rely on the script and the sculptural evidence. Abundant are also the honorific texts where important figures, group or single individuals, are honoured by the Senate and People. The last category is represented by dedications made to and by the gods.

As one can understand from the title, the main interest was given to the Palmyrene material available. All the inscriptions in Palmyrene that were analyzed come from the oasis itself and from the places reached by Palmyrene traders and soldiers: South Shields (England), Romania, Hungary, Rome (Italy), El-Kantara (Tunisia), Lambaesis (Algeria), Denderah (Egypt), Beth Sheʿarim, Dura-Europos, Merv oasis (Turkmenistan), etc.

I. CATALOGUE

I. CATALOGUE

The present catalogue gathers a list of all personal names attested in Palmyrene inscriptions written mainly in Aramaic (Palmyrene) and Greek. The material used was for the most part already published and the author has revised and checked all the readings on the basis of photographs and plates available. In this regard, the catalogue of the Musée du Louvre, the catalogue of the Ny Carlsberg Glyptotek and the Japanese work on Palmyrene Sculptures have been invaluable for the clearness of the photographs that allowed a safe interpretation of the inscriptions. New and improved readings have been included in the catalogue and the philological explanation and the vocalization of new names have been provided in the genealogical trees section .

A portion of the epigraphic data is represented by the photographic material not yet interpreted like several plates in the Japanese monograph by K. Tanabe, Sculptures of Palmyra, I, Tokyo 1987, the catalogue of a recent exhibition in Paris, Syrie, Mémoire et Civilisation, 1993, with a section on Palmyra, an unpublished stele of the goddess Allat with inscription and the photograph of a fragmentary inscription published in J. Starcky-M. Gawlikowski, Palmyre, Paris 1985, p. 85 which have been all studied and added to the thesis.

The catalogue is arranged as follows: the first entry gives the Palmyrene personal name according to the North-West Semitic alphabet. Feminine names are pointed out, in the whole list and in the section of the family trees, by a superscript f. In the case of the same person being attested in more than one inscription, the name is designated by a number in superscript (all the MLKW<sup>1</sup> refer to the same individual; the same name may appear once in full and once in a shortened form also referring to the same person, TYMRŠW RB<sup>2</sup> = TYMŠ RB<sup>2</sup>). The number in superscript has been adopted only in the case of an undoubted reference to the same person on the basis of genealogical, chronological and onomastic evidence.

It can be noted that inscriptions mentioning the same person are not formulated in the same way. In some the genealogy may reveal the names of the descendants and in others the names of the ascendants of the person. In some the genealogy goes back to the 2nd or 3rd generation only, and in others the reference to the ancestry is more precise and includes more generations, therefore a careful work of deduction and intuition is required in the analysis of these data. The simplest way of identifying one individual attested in different texts is to look at his genealogy, at the names of his father, his grandfather, his great-grandfather, etc. Longer is the list of anthroponyms and safer is their identification. A good example can be found in the Malkû family (no.82) where at least five inscriptions mention a certain J. A. Nûrbel and his genealogy is identical in all of them (see Ingholt, Berytus 2 (1935) 91-95 no.2-3 and 97-100 no.6-8. After 212 AD, the year in which through the 'Constitutio Antoniniana' all the freemen of the Empire received the Roman citizenship, his name is introduced by the gentilic Julius Aurelius). The same precise genealogy can be found for Nûrbel's brother and sister, Malê and Aqmat Ḥabbâ. This family not only is attested in the same tomb but also in the same chamber of the tomb.

In the case in which the archaeological context is missing, we can only base ourselves on onomastics and chronology. The Belyada' family may offer an example of this type (see no.78). Three brothers, Belyada', 'Atenûrî and Ma'anû sons of Taim'amad, son of Belyada' make in 115 AD a dedication to the Anonymous God (they are attested together in one inscription, CIS 3995). A text found in a different place dates to 205 AD and it mentions a certain Taim'â son of M' [...], (son of) Taim'â, (ggs. of) Belyada'. Being the name Taim'â a shortened form of Taim'amad, we have surmised the latter to be the great-great-grand-father of Taim'â. Furthermore, the broken name M' [...] can be possibly restored M'[NW], that is Ma'anû. For this family both the onomastics and the chronology have supplied a valid ground so that these two groups were considered part of the same family.

Missing a long and safe genealogy and the chronology, the reconstruction of a family is made on the bases of onomastics and of sculptures. For the Malê Rabbâ family (see no.66) the only date available is 181 AD and the frequency of some names made difficult the work of identification. In this case sculpture becomes important in that it helps to make a distinction between a boy and a mature man bearing the same name (see the Marcus family, no.195) or it helps to discover a different iconography for two people bearing the same name and genealogy. The rarity of certain names favours the identification of people with the same ancestor's name as members of the same family (see the Isi'adar family, no.142). The name Septimius Worôd refers to the same person although his genealogy is never given and no sculptures bearing his portrait are found. He is only attested in honorary inscriptions for his public, religious and commercial activities and, because of the rarity of his name, he is scholarly recognized as the same person (see in the Catalogue under Worôd).

Each name of the general list is also followed by the number in bold of the family the bearer belongs to and the number of his position within the family tree so to avoid confusion in case of homonyms. For the same reason each family is introduced by a number that helps to identify families bearing the same name. Not for all the people attested in the texts has been possible to find a place in the genealogical trees. That is because of the high number of homonyms (some names are more common than others) and because of the difficulty to identify the archaeological context of inscriptions on busts and slabs removed from their original location. Almost seven thousand of individuals have been identified.

The second entry gives the Greek and/or Latin transcription of the name whenever attested. This is followed by the date according to the Christian era although the Palmyrene inscriptions are dated according to the Seleucid era, that corresponds to 312 AD. Furthermore, we have used sculptural evidence any time the inscription was undated or the date broken. In this case the dates are based on Ingholt's classification of Palmyrene sculpture, that is 50-150 AD, 150-200 AD and 200-250 AD.

The fourth column provides the full individual's genealogy as well as his position inside the genealogy itself. The simplest onomastic formula indicating a family relation is represented by X br Y 'X son of Y'. The most common formula, at Palmyra, is a three generations' one, X br Y br Z and also X br Y Z 'X son of Y, (son of) Z' where the names of the father and grandfather may follow one after the other with or without the word bar 'son'. The third name does not necessarily stand for the name of the grandfather but, may often represent the name of the forefather of the family. The presence or the absence of bar 'son' becomes, at times, of difficult interpretation. The absence of this term of kinship is usually understood here as a reference to the ancestor and the abbreviation (s. of; f. of; gf. of) indicating the family relation is put in brackets. It is possible to find a further reference to the ancestor, through which the whole family is known, in the expression dy, dmtqr ʾ and dy mtqr ʾ/h ‘called’ (the best examples can be found in the Šaʿat family, no.17; the Aʿakai family, no.22 and the Azarzirat family, no.76). Whenever two names within a genealogy present themselves one after the other preceded and followed by the term br ‘son’, they are listed together and regarded the first as the real name and the second as a way of referring to the ancestor of the family (see under YRḤBWLʾ ŠLMWY, ZBDBWL QRBLʾ, ʿTNTN KPTWT, ʿBYDW ʿSTYY/W, etc.). It is also frequent to find double names, being one of the two a Greek or Latin name added to the Semitic one following the onomastic fashion of the place.

References are usually given by text sigla, number and plate number. In the case of articles published in journals and Mélanges the page number is also given. The references include all the documents where each inscription has been published.
